Writing Histories (Updated edition)

Imagination and Narration

Edited by Ann Curthoys and Ann McGrath

A book for anyone wanting to write histories that capture the imagination and challenge the intellect. It aims to show that historical narrative and imagination can work together to produce works of history that are a pleasure to read. Nine well-known historians reflect on their work as writers, exploring areas such as how to get started, how to find a ‘voice’, how to enliven a description or a narrative, and how to find a worthwhile structure. This book will be an essential text for teachers and students in history-writing classes. However many historians, both students and established writers, will continue to write in isolation. This book is also intended for them.
